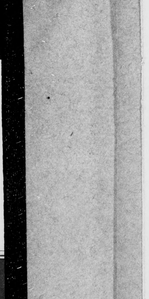
'Soil Surgeon' Declared Seedbed-Making Boon

Performs Multiple Work, Cuts Needed Time in Half

A new, efficient device for producing finer, smoother seedbeds is the latest implement for on the market.

Designed for use in a plowed county, the device does the combined work of a double-disc, spiked tooth harrow and a float—and manufacturers declare it gives the farmer a finer, smoother seedbed and half the ordinary time.

The exclusive use of the soil surgeon after plowing does not turn up weed seeds or plowed-under vegetation, thus giving a more rapid sprouting crop and richer soil. It levels the ground, fills all air pockets, and seals the moisture in the soil, thereby making for quicker germination and a higher yield.



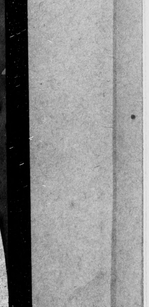
This "soil surgeon" is designed for use in a plowed field only. It does the work of a double-disc, a spike-toothed harrow and a float —and is said to give you a finer, smoother seedbed in half the time.

Sturdy and simple, the soil surgeon consists of two heavy steel pans with raised sides, to permit loading with dirt for added weight. These may be used singly or bolted together, depending on the desired width to be covered.

To the bottom of each pan are bolted 20 double-edged cultivator knives, each provided with a bearing to permit it to follow easily over automatically the tractor's line of travel. These heavy-duty knives slice the four and one-half inches of soil into one-inch strips, while the action of the pan pulverizes, smooths and levels the sliced soil in a way not approached by any other instrument currently in use on the farm.

The field should first be worked in the direction of plowing, using as many sections side by side as the tractor can pull with weight adjusted. The final finish is obtained by pulling the soil surgeon across the line of furrows. The soil surgeon should also be used as a crust breaker for all oncoming crops to mulch and kill small weeds.

Pacific Island Farm



"Pigs is pigs," no matter where you find them—even on the Pacific island of Guam in the Marianas. On farms established by the U. S. naval government on Guam, American sailors instruct natives in modern agricultural methods. Produce from the farms is used for naval personnel (who are fond of food anyway) for the rehabilitation of the natives. In the photo an American seaman is drying some of the pigs to feed.

Proper Carburetor Use Cuts Farm Fuel Costs

A heavy tractor operating under a load with the carburetor slightly out of adjustment may burn a half-gallon more fuel per hour. In the average 56 days a year that farm tractors operate, the tractor may burn 250 gallons more fuel annually than it should!

Proper carburetor adjustment would save 10 per cent of the total fuel burned in farm tractors annually.

WORLD PEACE

Music Aids UN Motives

WASHINGTON.—A music maker thinks that if we substituted ballads for bullets, peace would come to the world—and stay.

Saucer eyed Sammy Eisen, a 44-year-old band leader, thought it would be smart to go to another musician for a sympathetic hearing —piano playing President Truman.

Sammy couldn't get in to see Mr. T... in person, since the chief was out of town on important business. So he did the next best thing. He wrote him a note.

He wants the President to use his high office to press the United Nations into adopting an official anthem.

He reasoned that if army and navy enlistments could be hyped and battles won with inspiring music, then the right set of octaves might turn the world toward global peace.

The baton wielder first tried his plan out on Secretary General Trygve Lie of the UN. He got a wire back saying that the United Nations merely is interested in a musical radio signature.

Appeals to President.

Sammy then appealed to the President, "who knows the value of music, which makes for companionship and friendship."

"Whoever heard of a man coming out with his fists up after singing a song?"

"Music binds folk together," Sammy said. "And an anthem, conveying respect and feeling for peace and rights of others, would do a lot. More than a million articles, speeches, books or even another war."

He thinks that a little music would do much toward knitting the UN more closely together — "and perhaps prevent a few walkouts and vetoes cast in the white heat of argument."

The band leader admits that authoring an anthem that could be acceptable to the peoples of the world would be no simple task. But he's got that one figured out, too.

World Collaboration.

According to his idea, every nation represented in the United Nations would pick its leading composer. All these musical masters then would sit down calmly (Sammy hopes) at a clef writing jamboree to melt their ideas into one great tune.

Imagine Toscanini, Irving Berlin and all the others sitting down at one big table!

The idea man admitted it might take a little time—years maybe—what with each composer trying to pawn his own native jingles off onto the world. The title page on the sheet music would have to be printed in small type to get all the credit lines in.

If Sammy's plan goes through, he would like to get one little word of advice in edgewise—in advance.

He thinks an international anthem —if we ever get one—ought to steer shy of martial music. It should inspire peace, not belligerency.

Hiccup Victim Fails to Get Relief From 10,000 Letters

WAYNESBURG, PA.—Ten thousand letters of advice and suggested cures have failed to help Pauline Lucas. She has been hiccuping for 225 days.

The 31-year-old brunette started to hiccup after undergoing an operation. Originally the spasms came at a rate of 75 a minute but have since slowed to 20.

"She shows no improvement and she has tried about everything," said her physician, Dr. A. J. Blair.

The letters poured into Waynesburg hospital after her plight was made public.

Miss Lucas dropped from 129 pounds to 78 but intravenous feedings and vitamin injections have bolstered her weight to 97 pounds.

Foxes Spread Rabies

In several of the southern states and in New York state, foxes have become a serious threat to rabies control, due to the fact that many of them have this disease. Dr. Raymond Fagan, veterinarian for the Indiana state board of health, reports that considerable progress is being made in eliminating this menace by shooting and trapping foxes. If the fox population is kept down by continuous hunting and trapping, rabies from this source will be a less serious problem to human beings, dogs, and pastured animals, Dr. Fagan says.

Miniature Cars Popular

Miniature automobile business is booming to such an extent that miniature makers are turning out replicas of real automobiles by the thousands on assembly lines similar to those of automobile manufacturers. It is reported that some automobile dealers, who cannot get enough real cars to meet demands, are buying miniature cars and handing them out to customers on their waiting list to remind the latter that they haven't been forgotten. The little cars with the dealer's name stamped on the roof also serve another good will use as toys for youngsters.

Selection of Feeds Vital in Stock Health

Ration Must Be Adequate In Minerals, Vitamins

What you feed your livestock today will determine the profit you make tomorrow, for experts are agreed that keeping livestock healthy is a profitable job—and to do that, care must be observed in choosing livestock feed.

Feeding livestock on a ration deficient in minerals, vitamins, proteins and carbohydrates, as well as fats, often leads to nutritional diseases. Lack of any of the common or trace minerals in home grown feeds may be and often is, responsible for terrific livestock, feed, labor and investment losses.

The problem of supplying minerals in their right proportions is only a part of the compounding of a product that will solve the livestock man's problems. First, no matter how good the ingredients that go into the making up of a feed, if livestock refuse to eat it the feed is useless so far as benefiting the animal is concerned.

In recent years much has been discovered about livestock diseases due to dietary influences. In this connection, U. S. department of agriculture says: "Whenever a vital function . . . is interrupted owing to continued feeding of the diet to supply sufficient quantities of essential nutrients, or to the inability of the body to utilize these nutrients, the so-called nutritional diseases develop."

Grand Champ

'Love Apple' Popular

The scarcity of tomatoes in the past year's otherwise abundant harvests recalls something of the history of this romantic fruit-vegetable.

A sharp drop in production in some of the nation's principal tomato-growing areas means smaller domestic stocks of tomato soup, juices, stews, ketchup and chili sauce this winter. Unseasonable weather is given as the cause.

One hundred years ago the tomato was just beginning an uphill fight for respectability as a food item. Indians of the Andes had cultivated it since about 1600 A. D. The Aztecs of Mexico gave it the name that Cortez' men altered into "tomato"—and they probably said "toh-mah-toh." And the Spaniards took it back to Europe, but there it was recognized as a member of the deadly night-shade family.

It was wrinkled and small and was known as the "love apple" in Europe and, later, in North America. And for centuries the supposedly poisonous fruit was nothing more than a garden ornament.

Paper Lining Doubles Effect of Light Shades

Lights around the house often seem dim at the time of year when evenings are longer. But light from lamps often can be increased by arranging for simple and better reflection.

Light colors reflect light, dark colors absorb it. A white paper lining or a coat of white paint—or even white shoe polish on the inside of a lamp shade may double or triple the light given off.

Empty Cotton Bags

Ingenious use has been made of empty cotton feed and flour bags by some home sewers. One woman in Memphis, Tenn., redecorated her whole house with bag fabric, using the empty bags to make curtains, slip covers, and tablecloths. Many home sewers report that they have outfitted their entire families in cotton bag garments. In 1947 approximately 750 million yards of cotton fabric was used in making bags. Had all this material been re-used by home sewers, there would have been fabric enough for more than 214 million dresses!

Uncle Sam Says

Many thousands of wise fathers, husbands and sons know there is no more thoughtful Christmas gift than a U. S. Savings Bond. So put your dollars into Savings Bonds because they are the safest, soundest investment you can make for those you love. Every dollar is guaranteed by the government and the value increases steadily. For every $3 you pay today returns $4 in just ten years. You should be enrolled for the Payroll Savings Plan where you work, or if self-employed, for the Bond-a-Month Plan where you bank. Either way you will be choosing a winner.

Artificial Ponds on Farms Yield New, Valuable Crop

Farmers in the United States are raising a new crop, along with the traditional corn and wheat. That crop is fish.

According to the 1948 printing of the Encyclopedia Britannica, thousands of farmers are engaging in fish culture at the present time in their own once-dry pastures.

A lakeside location is not necessary to fish culture. Artificial ponds have been constructed on tens of thousands of farms since 1940, Britannica reveals.

"These ponds, normally ranging from one-half acre to several acres in size, are stocked with large-mouth bass and sunfish fingerlings in a ratio of 100 bass to 1,000 or 1,500 sunfish per acre. The ponds are then fertilized to produce natural food and may yield 200 to 300 pounds of fish per year."

Stocking these ponds with young fish is a job undertaken by federal and state fish hatcheries, operating at capacity to fill the increasing demand. Statistics in Britannica show several hundred hatcheries in active operation.

School Lunches Studied Right Off Plate in School

What children actually eat—not just the menu for the day—determines the real nutritive value of their school lunch. This viewpoint has prompted nutritionists of the U. S. department of agriculture to make a study of school lunches right off the plate in two Maryland schools.

Twenty-eight lunches served at two seasons were the basis of this study by Dr. Millicent Hathaway and Dr. Frieda Meyer of the bureau of human nutrition and home economics. They are now analyzing chemically those meals served to children in the third to sixth grade, and have thus far checked up on three important vitamins.

Judging from the meals analyzed, vitamin C is low in many school lunches, except on days when orange juice is served. Including citrus fruit juice in the noon meal is a simple and effective way of assuring that the school child will get sufficient vitamin C, the nutritionists advise.

The B vitamin, thiamine, is probably the nutrient most often low in school lunches, they observe. Only one of the 28 lunches provided one-third of the day's needs of this vitamin as recommended for 12-year-olds by the national research council. Ten lunches provided enough thiamine for eight-year-old children. Peanut butter, dried beans, split pea soup and similar foods are good sources of this vitamin.

The lunches provided amply for the B vitamin riboflavin. Milk is credited with giving important aid in this respect. The nutritionists comment that it is well for school lunches to supply liberal amounts of riboflavin since many youngsters get little milk at home.

Every Bird Is Different

No two birds are exactly alike in appearance. They differ in size, in color, and in pattern. Sometimes even in a casual acquaintance with the birds on the lawn, there will be a few one can recognize individually: an especially bright bluejay, a robin with an unusually red breast, or a yellow warbler with extra-heavy chestnut breast markings. But even the sparrows that look exactly alike to a casual glance will, on closer study, turn out to be recognizable as individuals.

Save Cabbage Leaves

There are saving ways to use outer leaves of cabbage that so often get thrown away. They can be saved and even used in cooked cabbage dishes or cole slaw if you treat them right. Just trim away any spotted or bruised places, sprinkle with water and crisp in the hydrator or other covered pan in the refrigerator. Remember that cabbage contains a high amount of vitamin C.
